LEGAL PROFESSION IS NOT ABOUT PROFIT MAXIMIZATION, BUT ABOUT SERVICE TO SOCIETY: CJI NV RAMANA.

IN THIS ISSUE

Chief Justice of India NV Ramana on Tuesday noted that the legal profession is not about profit Maximisation but service to the society.

NV Ramana addressing the law students at the event organized by the National Legal Services Authority (NALSA) on the occasion of the Legal Service Day. He said that genesis of the Legal aid movement was during the independence and after the concept became institutionalized in 1959.

The Legal Services Act came in year 1995. The movement started in the freedom movement when stalwart lawyer offered services pro bono to freedom fighters said by the NV Ramana.

NV Ramana also said that the growth of the legal services was reflected in the Indian Constitution, and it was the decision of the Justice in the Social, Economic and Political and it find the special place in Preamble. The idea of legal aid was confirmed by the courtrooms earlier. But over 26 years the various authorities gave different and expanded meanings to the Access to Justice. But in today's scenario legal aid is not limited to the Court based on the legal representation.

CJI NV Ramana also added that we work more towards the access to Justice, Legal Awareness, Alternative dispute resolution. He went on to state that students educated in law are empowered to the vulnerable and marginalized society.

Justice Joddy U Lall Executive Chairman of the NALSA also emphasized his need of the legal awareness in every nook and corner of the society and said people can utilize and exercise of their rights.

FAITH HAVE NO BEARING ON INDIVIDUAL'S FREEDOM

IN THIS ISSUE:-

The Delhi High Court has recently held that the freedom of choice in marriage is in accordance with law is an intrinsic part of Article 21 protection of life and personal liberty of the Constitution. In view of the above, the High Court said that the police should not expeditiously in cases of couples legally marrying out of their own free will and volition.

A bench of Justice Anoop Kumar Mendiratta noted, "Even questions of faith have no bearing on an individual's freedom to choose a life partner and are essence of personal liberty."

It was hearing a case of an alleged attempt to murder of a man by the relatives of a woman who married him against their wishes. The kin, including her mother and grandmother, allegedly beat him up, cut off his private parts with an axe and also stabbed him.

Considering the grave nature of the offence and the 'ghastly manner in which the assault', the HC refused to grant bail to the wife's mother and grandmother who allegedly participated in the assault. The court said it was 'unfortunate' that necessary steps for ensuring the safety and security of the couple were not initiated by the police station concerned on their complaint when they were expected to act with promptitude and any such lapse cannot be accepted and thus called for action against those responsible.

Wherever the life and liberty of any individual is concerned, especially in cases of couple legally marrying out of their own free will and volition, the police is expected to act expeditiously and with sensitivity in accordance with law and take necessary measures for protection and safety of applicants concerned, if they apprehend hostility and concerns for their safety from different quarters including their own family members," the court said.
